Project

Food Runner is an Android food delivery app that allows users to browse restaurants and their menus, and place food orders. The app has been developed using XML and Kotlin programming languages, which are commonly used for Android app development.

The XML language has been used to define the user interface elements, such as the layout, colors, and styles. Kotlin has been used for the app's logic, such as adding functionality to layouts.

Food Runner has a sign-up feature that allows users to create an account within the app. Users can add their personal information, such as their name, email address, and phone number, to register and log in to the app.
